

MASTERING HVLA MANIPULATION: APPLICATION IN A BUSY OSTEOPATHIC PRACTICE

Aug. 10-12, 2018 • The Pyramids • Indianapolis

Course Description

Direct method high-velocity, low-amplitude (HVLA) techniques can be extremely effective, efficient, long-lasting and gentle manipulative procedures. The HVLA techniques presented in this course will address representative dysfunction in all areas of the body from foot to occiput; will embrace care delivered in a wide range of body positions (supine, prone, seated and lateral recumbent); and will address many common clinical conditions associated with pain and dysfunction.

Techniques will be taught in the context of implementing postural-biomechanical or respiratory-circulatory clinical healthcare model goals in order to quickly impact common clinical conditions including headache, back pain, chest pain, and limb dysfunction. This method is designed to provide a logical context for later office use and for understanding indications and contraindications.

Course Director

Michael L. Kuchera, DO, FAO, FNAOME, is a specialist in neuromusculoskeletal medicine. He has served on faculties for three osteopathic medical schools, most recently as a professor at the Marian University College of Osteopathic Medicine in Indianapolis. He has served the schools in a variety of capacities from residency director and chairperson of Osteopathic Manipulative Medicine to dean. He was a co-director of the Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine's Center for Chronic Disorders of Aging where he conducted clinical research as the director of its Human Performance & Biomechanics Laboratory.

Dr. Kuchera has co-authored several textbooks, and he is a frequent and highly sought-after international speaker on diagnosing and managing somatic dysfunction in patients with pain, systemic disorders or specific neuromusculoskeletal complaints. He has been recognized for his work as a researcher, as a leader and as a medical educator, and the American Association of Colleges of Osteopathic Medicine has awarded him fellowships in the areas of medical education, medical education leadership, and for authoring educational works of enduring value.
